SAUNTERINGS

Portland has abolished the cabaret adjunct to the cafes and the report is that in consequence there is better food and less noise, and those who do not care to have the ear splitting stuff with their meals are living in comfort again. The cabaret certainly put the din into dining and there will be a lot of people greatly pleased if it were taken out. It was a novelty for a while, but it is not wearing well, and even those who were most enthusiastic a year or two ago are willing to have it stopped. A number of New York res taurants have stopped the cabaret features during dinner and supper, but at 12 o'clock put on a whole musical comedy, with stars, chorus, etc., and the report is that the places introducing the novelties are crowded to the doors. The show lasts two hours, beginning at 12 o'clock in the center of a large space surrounded by supper tables. That is all right for the big cities, but we doubt very much if it would pay here, especially with the 12 o'clock ban on drinks, even if the rule is not observed everywhere in the city.

Mrs. Daniel Jackling has a wit that outshines any of the jewels that have been showered on her since her marriage to the mining magnate. Before her marriage she made simplicity, to the verge of severity, the keynote of her apparel, and has never shown any penchant for jewelry or ornamentation of any kind. However, she has now a collection of gems so rare that they are lifted out of the commonplace, and she enjoys them with the appreciation of a collector, even if she does not find any particular thrill in wearing them, says the San Francisco News-Letter.

Mr. Jackling has long been a collector of emeralds, and in addition to magnificient pearls and diamonds he presented his wife with his collection of emeralds, some of which were set from designs which she selected here and in New York. In addition to the jewels given her by her husband, the members of her immediate family for the most part made their wedding gifts in the form of jewelry, for it was difficult to find anything else for her, her husband already having all the appointments of a home and a yacht.

A night or two before the Jackling party left for Salt Lake there was some difference of opinion as to whether it would be more fun to stay at home or go out to the exposition to see the illuminations.

"We can stay right here, if you prefer," said Mrs. Jackling, in her inimitable way, "and I'll put on all my wedding presents and you won't be able to tell me from the Tower of Jewels," which remark no one appreciated more than her husband.

Society is still chattering about the battle which took place at the Tennis club last week during the visit of a distinguished party of gue-ts.

MISS MARJORIE HOWARD AND HER GUEST, MISS VIRGINIA ECCLES OF CHICAGO

One charming matron, who attended the affair took exception to some remarks made by a visitor from Boston and the resultant repartee was very edifying. Neutrals tried to passify the belligerents, but were not entirely successful, and they left in anything but a gracious mood. An echo of the recent visit here of Governor Whitman and his party from New York is contained in a little yarn in which Captain Crosby, a dignified aristocrat, and the son of a prominent state official here, were the principals. Some members of the party were looking for a bit of life one evening, and so the young man volunteered to lead them to a place where they could find it. They went to a crowded cabaret where there is considerable entertainment, such as it is, and a freedom that is not always to be had in the surroundings at some restaurants.

Captain Crosby was all dignity, unbending and severe, but at that he was looking around at the beauties and other sights and finally said to the young guide: "Who is that charming young lady over there." With a fine display of savey the statesman's son replied: "That's a cousin of mine. I will introduce you to her; but don't pull any rough stuff." There was a look of blank amazement on the part of the captain, followed by roars of laughter from his confreres, and he was immediately given the sobriquet of "rough stuff Crosby," which stuck to him until the party reached the train, and perhaps will be used throughout the trip. It was quite an experience for such a dignified representative of Gotham

The wedding of Miss Frances McChrystal and Leo A. McNamee of Las Vegas, Nevada, will occur at St. Mary's cathedral on next Thursday morning. The Very Rev. Beginning Monday morning, June 14, at 8:30, the doors of this store will open on one of the two greatest merchandise sales of the year—Our Semi-Annual Inventory Sale.

Every department in the store contributes hundreds of genuine bargains to this event--not insignificant price reductions for the mere purpose of working up a "sale," but real, substantial, money-saving cuts, made necessary in order to reduce stocks before inventory time.

We urge customers to endeavor to do their shopping during the early days of this sale. It is to the advantage of both store and customers if shopping is done before style, color and size lines are broken. Monday Morning—at 8:30. Be here.
